WHAT WOULD ROBERT HAVE SAID? OR WOULD HE JUST BE PLEASED?

► Well, it's too late to know that right now because Robert (†1969) did not tell Cassandra —his loving counter-punch— the solution to this dramatic riddle everyone's trying to solve these days. ¶ I (for one) share the drive to search the outbacks of a smaller growing world to find out if Roberts' dog may have been implanted with a knowledge gene, which properly extracted can be utterly useful and in the same time fully harmless for all known species.

This brain sample was extracted on a tuesday from Jos Buivenga. The full body of it was captured in Anivers 26 pt. with an (InDesign) auto leading of 31.2 pt. Thank God it wasn't on a shameless friday.
